Teaching More by Grading Less (or Differently)

The authors explore a history of grading and review the literature regarding the purposes and impacts of grading. They then suggest strategies for making grading more supportive of learning, including balancing accuracy-based and effort-based grading, using self/peer evaluation, curtailing curved grading, and exercising skepticism about the meaning of grades.

By switching to clean energy across our supply chain, we can erase the majority of that footprint. Since 2015, Apple's Supplier Clean Energy Program has helped our manufacturing suppliers transition to renewable electricity generated from solar, wind, and other renewable projects. And by 2030, all our products will be made with 100% clean energy.

One need only consider the story of Thomas Jefferson's family to appreciate the gap between what is recorded in history books and what is recorded in our genome (Ellis, 1998; Foster et al., 1998). If in fact the genetic history of our species is essentially complete and unbiased, the opportunities for objective description are limitless, constrained only by the questions we are ...
